

Education and Articles

A chiropractor is a medical professional trained specifically to diagnose and treat disorders of the nervous and musculoskeletal system. In their diagnoses, they will often use traditional testing methods such as lab work, MRIs, and X-rays. These traditional methods are often combined with specific chiropractic techniques that involve hands-on manipulations of the body's joints.